CARLISLE.

News Culled From Nicholas County Precincts.

The City Primary is set for the 19th of June.

The Spring term of Nicholas Circuit Court convenes on the third day of May.

W. A. Fowle, of Ellisville, is a candidate for Coroner of Nicholas county.

James A. Barr, of near this city, made an assignment to Thos. H. Pickrell, of the Farmers' Bank, last Friday.

Jas. Watson, who kept the tollgate at the Sherburne bridge, was stricken with paralysis Wednesday and died Thursday morning.

County Judge Tilton has received information from State Board of Equalization that the assessed value of lands in Nicholas county has been raised 8 per cent; town lots 10 per cent.

On the 1st Saturday in May there will be an election of two Trustees of the Carlisle Graded School. The election will be held at the Court House between the hours of one and six o'clock p. m.

The Court House clock and the Carlisle Mill whistle are now guided by standard time. If you were sentenced to be hung at 12 o'clock, this would give you 2½ minutes more to live. —[Mercury.]

The tax levy for the year 1897 for Nicholas was made as follows: 15 cents for sinking fund, 4 cents for Bearfoot and Mt. Pleasant Turnpike, 15 cents for current expenses. Amounting to 34 cents on the $100. A poll tax of $1.50 was levied.

Important Notice.

On and after April 1st, 1897, I will work strictly for cash. I will keep no books and will therefore not credit anyone. I will discount my bills ten per cent., but will positively not do any credit business. I am compelled to give my collector ten per cent. for collecting my bills, and, therefore, I will lose nothing by this method, but will protect myself from losses and at the same time I will save my patients ten per cent.

I will thank my patients if they will call and settle all their old bills and save costs.

Thanking you for past kindnesses, I hope still to merit a part of your patronage. Sincerely, (30mar-97) DR. J. R. ADAIR.

MASSACRED.

Inmates of a Hospital Slaughtered by the Spaniards.

Patriot Bluff Spaniards and the Town of Faiso Was Looted—Gen. Luque Says Cuba Is Virtually Lost to Spain Through Weyler's Mismanagement.

NEW YORK, April 21.—A special dispatch from the Sun from Havana says: One of the most shocking illustrations of the savage warfare carried on by the Spaniards in Cuba happened Monday in this province, between the villages of Guanachu and Jesus Maria.

Lieut. Col. Herrera, at the head of a guerrilla force of some 200 men, surprised a Cuban hospital, in which about 100 sick and wounded were being treated. Every one inside of the hospital was killed by the invaders, who did not even spare two old women who were acting as nurses.

One of the three wounded persons who made their escape by creeping, covered with blood as they were, to a neighboring forest, tells of the massacre in a letter addressed to a friend in Havana.

"It was about 11 o'clock in the morning when a shot from our outposts revealed to us the presence of the Spaniards. Believing the place was safe from any attack of the enemy, hidden as it was in the forest, the Cuban detachment of 200 men who guarded us retired from the hospital three days ago to take the field. Only ten men were left for our protection, and they were poorly armed with old carbines. They did their best to save us, but the Spaniards surrounded them and hacked them to pieces with their machetes. Ten minutes later they had surrounded us also and began their massacre of defenseless wounded men and innocent women."

"It is impossible to describe in words the horrible scene. Driven out from their couches, my poor suffering-sufferers huddled in the middle of the room and cried in vain for mercy. The Spaniards answered these cries with insults, macheted some and thrust their bayonets into the bodies of the others.

HAVANA, VIA KEY WEST, Fla., April 21.—The town of Faiso, in the Matanzas province, was raided Thursday afternoon by a Cuban force of about 300, supposedly under one of the officers from Gen. Laceret's army. The place has three block houses and a garrison of about 80 Spaniards. The Cubans crept through between the block houses early in the morning, and before the Spaniards were aware of their presence they were entrenched in a stone church in the center of the town. They sent word to the Spanish officers that they had come there for supplies, and if they were permitted to get them and retire without trouble they would not attack them, but if the Spanish troops disturbed them they would burn the town and capture and destroy the blockhouses.

This bluff succeeded. The Cuban force looted seven or eight stores nearest the church, taking large quantities of supplies. Before leaving they compelled the aleade of the town to have tables spread in the church, whereupon the officers sat down to a feast, to which a large number of persons attended. After remaining in the town for six or seven hours without disturbance, the force retired.

Gen. Luque, who succeeded Gen. Bernal, has resigned and expects to leave for Spain on the next steamer. He is outspoken in his criticism of Weyler's tactics and says Cuba is virtually lost to Spain through Weyler's mismanagement.

BILLY VERNON

Badly Injured in a Boxing Bout in Athens, Pa.—May Not Recover.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—Billy Vernon, of Haverstraw, N. Y., was probably fatally injured in a boxing bout with Leslie Pearce, of Camden, N. J., at the Olympic Athletic club, Athens, Pa., Tuesday night. The fight had been scheduled for 15 rounds, and at the opening of the fourteenth both men came up fresh and smiling. After sparring for an opening, Vernon made a left swing which Pearce cleverly countered and both men broke away. More sparring followed and Vernon made a vicious left lunge. Pearce ducked without attempting a return when Vernon suddenly collapsed and fell heavily forward on his face. He was counted out, but continued to lay motionless after Pearce had retired to his dressing room. Vernon's second, Paul Dime, of Amsterdam, N. Y., made an effort to rouse him but he lay still. Then several doctors pushed their way to the ringside and, upon their direction, the unconscious man was carried to his room. At a late hour he was still senseless and the physicians gave but slight hope of his recovery. Pearce was placed under arrest, but every other person connected with the affair managed to escape before the authorities got wind of it. There were about 2,000 spectators.

Will Support Bundy.

BALTIMORE, April 21.—Leading colored citizens of Annapolis and Baltimore hold the opinion that Bundy should maintain his right to enter the naval academy and hold his commission in the navy. They think the time has come when the colored people should assert all their political and official rights. The colored people at Annapolis, forming a large portion of the population, will welcome Bundy and give him all the assistance possible.

Chas. B. Reid Indicted for Murder.

MACON, Ga., April 21.—Chas. B. Reid, who shot and killed L. M. Halstead, an attache of a circus, in this city April 7, because of an insult said to have been offered to Reid's wife by Halstead, was indicted for murder by the grand jury of Bibb county Tuesday.

May Be Sent to Madrid.

HAVANA, April 21.—La Lucha prints a dispatch from New York which says that President McKinley will send Gen. Fitzhugh Lee to represent the United States in Madrid. Lee refuses to affirm or deny.

HUNTER WITHDRAWS.

He Asks That Another Caucus for a Candidate Be Held.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 22.—The following notes were made public at noon Wednesday:

"Hon. William H. Jones, Chairman of the Republican Joint Caucus, Frankfort, Ky.—Sir: I shall be obliged if you will call the republican members of the general assembly in joint caucus at the earliest time convenient to receive a communication which I desire to present to their consideration. Very truly, W. GODFREY HUNTER."

To the Republican Members of the General Assembly of Kentucky: Responding to a request just received from Hon. W. Godfrey Hunter, republican nominee for United States senator, you are hereby called to meet in joint caucus in the hall of the house of representatives in Frankfort this Wednesday, April 21, 1897, at 8 p.m., for the purpose of receiving a communication referred to and to take such action in the senatorial matter as may be deemed advisable.

"W. H. JONES,

"Chairman."

The above means that Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter has given up all hope of being elected United States senator from Kentucky.

Already the woods is full of candidates who are willing, yeas, anxious to take his place, but the race will probably narrow down between Judge W. W. Holt and W. J. Deboe, although "there are others." Holt is believed to have the best chance.

On joint ballot Wednesday the following was the result: Hunter, 56; Blackburn, 41; Martin, 12; Boyle, 6; Stone, 1; no election.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 22.—No ballot was taken in the senatorial caucus Wednesday night, but the vote on the motion to adjourn till Thursday night was a fair test of the strength of the Hunter and anti-Hunter elements of the party. The Hunter men, who are for Deboe, voted against adjourning, while the anti-Hunter men, a majority of whom are for Judge Holt, voted to adjourn.

Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, after abandoning the senatorial fight at Frankfort, Wednesday afternoon, secretly boarded the Chesapeake and Ohio express as it left the capital Wednesday night. He was accompanied by his wife.

LEVEE BREAKS

At Shipland Landing, Miss.—A Mighty Rush of Water Over the Surrounding Country.

JACKSON, Miss., April 22.—The Greenville correspondent of the Associated Press wires Wednesday morning as follows:

At 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning the dreadful alarm cry of "Levee broke" was repeated for the sixth time in the Yazoo, Mississippi delta, when the huge 18 foot levee at Shipland Landing, Issaquena county, suddenly crumbled away, letting in with a mighty rush and roar the ponderous torrent of the great river. Shipland is on Promised Land plantation, about two miles below Lake Providence, Louisiana. At the time of the break back water from the upper crevasses was already against the levee some ten or twelve inches deep and many high places around were still uncovered. Hope was entertained that the worst had passed and that the fearful flood had spent its fury in the wreck and ruin already wrought. But it was not so. Many fine plantations upon which partial crops might have been made must now share the fate of the rest, and in all of lower Issaquena, Sharkey and Yazoo counties, where there was a foot of water before, there will be three feet or more. Places which have heretofore been havens of refuge for live stock and human beings will now have to be abandoned, and in a few short days there will scarcely be a dry spot in all the country south of this break between the levees and the Yazoo river. Whether there be life lost in the region immediately affected, depends upon the question whether the people are provided with boats. In addition to the disastrous local consequences of the break, it will also have the effect of raising the water in the Yazoo river, and keeping that stream up at its mouth to such an extent as to retard the outflow of flood water in the upper delta country.

DAMAGING FROSTS

In the Peninsular Section of Virginia—The Southwest Suffered Very Little.

RICHMOND, Va., April 22.—In the peninsular section of Virginia there was heavy frost Tuesday night, and some damage to early fruit and vegetables. No fear is indicated for the fruit in the Danville section, and there will be only slight injury in the Prince William and Loudoun tier of counties.

Norfolk reports heavy damage to truck in the counties of Virginia seaboard and Eastern North Carolina, and the fruit around Charlottesville suffers, it is thought, seriously. Small fruit in the Staunton district is said to have been killed, but the apple crop is regarded as safe. The southwest seems to have suffered very little.

Murderer Kelley Taken to Somersworth.

MONTREAL, April 22.—Jos. E. Kelley, the self-confessed murderer of Cashier Stickney, of Somersworth, N. H., was taken to Dover, N. H., Wednesday night. He consented to return, waiving extradition proceedings. Wednesday Kelley confessed that he wore a disguise when he went to rob the bank.

Lineman Burned to Death.

ST. LOUIS, April 22.—In the center of the business section of the city Wednesday Edward Clayland, a lineman for the Missouri Electric Light and Power Co., was burned Wednesday by a live wire. His smoking body hung in the air for at least ten minutes in view of thousands who were attracted to the scene.

Charles Fillius for Governor.

WARREN, O., April 22.—Charles Fillius, of Warren, a leading attorney, is being talked of for governor by the democrats. Fillius is widely known as a strong talker.

CITY OF DAMASI

Captured and Burned by the Greeks in a Desperate Fight.

The Situation at Tyrnavo Is Somewhat in Doubt—The Turks Shelling the Town—The Greeks Cross the Frontier at Bani—Severe Artillery Duel.

ATHENS, April 21.—News has just reached here that the Greeks, after a desperate battle, have captured and burned Damasi. Vigilia is still resisting. Another division of the Greek troops, it is reported, has traversed the Reveni pass and captured three block houses. This division has almost reached Damasi, where it will effect a union with the force that captured the town. The 30,000 troops under Gen. Smolenitz displayed the greatest bravery.

Reveni lies 12 miles northwest of Larissa. Edhem Pasha with a force variously estimated at from 10,000 to 14,000 troops led seven assaults against it Monday, but all were repulsed by the Greeks.

Crown Prince Constantine telegraphs here that the Turks at that point were completely and finally repulsed.

In Athens greater attention has been paid to the operations in the neighborhood of Reveni than to those at Miloua pass. The theory all along has been, that if the Greeks could establish themselves at Damasi, their road to the end is open.

The exact situation at Tyrnavo is somewhat in doubt. The news from that point is conflicting. But there is no confirmation of the rumor that the place has been captured by the Turks. What seems to have happened at Tyrnavo was evacuated in order to send troops forward to Reveni and was then reoccupied by troops returning from Miloua.

MILOUNA PASS, April 21.—The Turks have just commenced to shell the town of Tyrnavo. All the roads leading to Larissa are crowded with fugitives shouting, "Reserves, don't try conclusions with the Turks."

The Greek villages in the plain are completely deserted.

ATHENS, April 21.—A despatch from Arta says that 3,000 Greeks have crossed the frontier at Bani, and a severe artillery duel has been in progress since Monday. The Greek artillery have silenced the Turkish imaret fort, commanding the town. Two attempts by the Turks to cross the river were repulsed. There has been brisk artillery and infantry firing along the line for about five miles. Two Greek officers and many Turks have been killed.

ATHENS, April 21.—The report of the capture of Damasi by the Greeks under Gen. Smolenitz is confirmed by official despatches. Official despatches report also that further heavy breaches have been made in the Turkish forts at Prevesa. The bombardment ceased at nightfall, but was resumed Wednesday morning.

The ironclad Spetzia has left the Gulf of Arta to join the eastern squadron which, it is said, has an important mission.

ATHENS, April 21.—The news of the capture of Damasi puts a new complexion upon the situation on the frontier, a great encouragement to the government, and is likely to have the most exhilarating effect upon the spirits of the Greeks, who had been greatly depressed by the reverses of their troops at Miloua Pass. This success and the fact that the fall of Prevesa seems imminent virtually offsets the calamity at Miloua. If the Greek divisions effect a union at Damasi, as is expected, there is almost nothing in the way of their prompt advance to Ellassona.

Should the Greeks succeed in reducing the forts at Prevesa, as now seems probable, and in occupying the town with the large land force co-operating with the bombarding warships, the road to Janina would be open and the Turkish troops in Epirus placed at the most serious disadvantage. The strategic value of Prevesa to the Turkish division in Albania is that so long as it remains in the hands of the Turks it makes possible a steady line of munitions and food supplies. With Prevesa in the hands of the Greeks this line would be promptly cut, and it would be practically impossible to revictual the Turkish troops by the long land route through Macedonia. On the other hand the Greek troops could be revictualled by sea.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—According to a dispatch to the Messenger, from Athens, dated Tuesday, the forces of the Turks and Greeks in the fighting which has taken place in the Miloua pass totalled up 30,000 men. The dispatch adds that Crown Prince Constantine assumes supreme command of the Greek forces which will fight the Turks Tuesday. It is also announced that King George of Greece leaves Athens for the frontier Tuesday.

ATHENS, April 21.—Fighting between the Greeks and Turks was resumed Tuesday morning at Reveni, not far from Tyrnavo, northwest from Larissa. A big battle is in progress. The Turks are attacking in still greater force than Monday, but the Greeks are making a stubborn resistance.

It was announced this evening that the Greeks have recaptured Gritzvali.

Col. Manos, in command of the Greek forces of the frontier of Epirus, has telegraphed to the government here that the Turks have bombarded the military hospital at Arta although the red cross flag was hoisted over it.

ATHENS, April 21.—There was renewed fighting between the Greeks and Turks in the Miloua pass Monday. It was of the most severe description, but full details are not obtainable here.

The firing ceased at 5 o'clock Monday evening. The total Greek loss in the various engagements in the Miloua pass is estimated here at 1,000 killed and wounded.

Over 200 wounded soldiers and officers of the Greek army have arrived at Larissa, Tyrnavo and Volo.

The losses of the Turks are declared to be much greater than those of the Greeks.

THE PROGRAMME

Of the Democrats With Reference to the Tariff Bill—Their Plan is Not to Delay the Bill Any Longer Than is Necessary.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—There has been some discussion of the probable programme of the democratic members of the finance committee with reference to the tariff bill and it is learned that while their plans are not definitely matured, they intend to have reasonable consideration of the bill in committee and believe that they will have the support of Senator Jones, of Nevada, upon any fair proposition they submit. The democrats do not want an extended consideration in committee, but may desire to offer some amendments after they have seen the bill, the adoption of which they consider they would be more likely to secure in the committee than in the open senate. It is said that in the senate the democratic plan is not to delay the bill any longer than is necessary, but that every senator desires to discuss it shall have the opportunity to do so, and that such record-making votes as the democrats think necessary shall be had. This policy the democrats will pursue to the end. In this connection it may be stated that the democrats of the senate do not approve of the policy of Mr. Bailey and his fellow democrats of the house. Attention is called to the fact that it was long ago said that the policy of Speaker Reed and the republicans of the house are pursuing would be followed in order to direct attention to the delay of the tariff bill in the senate. If delay should ensue by reason of debate by democratic senators it will be pointed out, democratic senators say, that this delay is not endorsed by the majority of the democrats of the house.

The Bailey democrats will be endorsing the republicans in their criticisms of the democratic senators. It is not known whether or not the democratic senators will be taken, but it is known that the house democrats are freely giving the democrats of the house will be taken, but it is known that house democrats have been advised that acquiescence in the republican tactics is not good policy. The democratic senators do not want criticisms which may be directed at them to be indirectly endorsed by the democratic members of the house.

It was learned Wednesday that in the changes made in the tariff bill by the senate sub-committee the rates in the metal schedule have been made very close to the present law and the same is said of the cotton schedule.

The chemical schedule is understood to be about completed. Many changes in it in the direction of reductions have been made.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The secretary of war Wednesday sent to the house a report from the chief of engineers of the army upon the survey of the mouth of the Green river, Ky., with a view to the construction of a lock and dam. He reports that the proposed improvements would cost $24,000, and are not justified. The secretary also reports that the proposed acquisition of the channel excavated through the dam will be completed in every possible way, any bankruptcy bill which included involuntary bankruptcy. Mr. Morgan (rep. Minn.) amended his substitute bill so as to overcome criticisms heretofore made. Mr. Morgan gave notice that he would seek to secure a test on the pending Nelson substitute by moving at 4 p.m. Wednesday to lay the substitute on the table. Mr. Bacon (dem. Ga.) submitted numerous amendments modifying the stringency of the original bill as applicable to debtors.

HOUSE—Not in session.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—SENATE.—Most of the day was given to the bankruptcy bill. The bill on the substitute and amendments will be taken up at 3 p.m. Thursday. It was agreed that a committee of 15 senators should represent the senate at the coming Grant memorial ceremonies. Senator Mason, of Illinois, made his maiden speech in the senate Wednesday and signified it by some breezy criticism of the rules of the senate. The speech was in support of a resolution introduced by the Illinois senator directing the committee on rules to report a rule by which debate could be closed and the previous question ordered. Mr. Hoar (Mass.) replied briefly, pointing out that the other branch of congress was more open to criticism than the senate. He was in accord with Mr. Mason, however, on the need of new rules. A vote was taken on Mr. Morgan's motion to refer the Mason resolution to the rules committee, which prevailed, yeas 32, nays 21. A further discussion of the subject is suspended as Mr. Hoar has a pending resolution to discharge the committee on rules from further considering the reform of the rules.

HOUSE—The chaplain of the house, Mr. Couden, in his prayer Wednesday gave thanks that this nation was at peace with all others and prayed that higher and holier methods than war might prevail everywhere. He prayed for the friends of Representative Milliken, of Maine, who died Sunday and whose desk was draped in black and covered with flowers. The death of Mr. Milliken was announced by Mr. Dingley, and out of respect the house adjourned until Thursday.

WEST VIRGINIA CROPS DAMAGED.

NEWPORT NEWS, W. Va., April 22.—A heavy frost fell throughout this section with a heavy damage to crops. In some places ice formed on poles. Owing to a brisk breeze which has prevailed nearly all night and the dry condition of the atmosphere but slight damage was done to the fruit trees, although in localities remote from the water they are said to have been frost bitten. The greatest damage was done to the peach crop, many acres of which was in bloom. The strawberry crop was also slightly injured.

WESTERN LEAGUE SEASON OPENS.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 22.—The Western League season of 1897 opened in this city Wednesday. The visitors could not touch big Bill Phillips and were shut out. The features of the game was the pitching of Phillips and the field work of the home team. Thirty-five hundred people witnessed the contest.

MASTERY.

front my life in the hush and pause Since the last blow fell; I will ask it now With truth between, and the challenge down, "Which of us two shall bow?" Shall I rule my life, or shall it rule me? Am I lord, or slave? Shall I bend me still In dull submission to force too strong For a weakened human will?

No, I am master; though wounded sore, A thrall of dreams, or a fool of chance, Though bound in an ancient servitude By fetters of circumstance.

Yet face me, life that is known as mine! Thou art the slave. I will wrest from thee The lash and the chain; I will know myself Ruler at last—and free.

CHAPTER XXVII.—CONTINUED.

At Wilmington there was consternation when the steamer came up the river and reported having seen a vessel, answering the description of the Mervine, lying in the trough of the sea off the inlet, with no one visible on board, and that ere they could reach her she went down.

The Mervine, not returning, rendered it certain that it was she. But how came she in the trough of the sea with no one visible on deck?

Where was her crew? Was it possible that she had encountered the pirates and been vanquished?

The captain who had sighted her reported having seen no other craft in the locality.

Forty marines and two officers of the law! Had the pirate Bullion led them into a trap?

It was conceded that he had. His acquiescence in the plan to use him to capture or exterminate the pirates was but for the purpose of saving his neck and leading the would-be captors of his friends to destruction.

No one in Wilmington knew for where the Mervine was bound when she left port, as Bullion refused to give any information until they were under way.

Where was the pirate?

No one had seen her.

Would Black Beard have visited Orton without his schooner?

If so, he had disappeared as usual, and left no trail behind.

Who was Black Beard?

Where was Angus Bruce?

There was much surprise at Lathrop's villainy, and no regret at his fate, whatever it might have been.

Uncle Sam immediately sent out half a dozen of his fleetest vessels to search the ocean wide for a craft that lay buried beneath thousands of tons of rocks at the head of the estuary of Smith's island, and a crew who slept peacefully beside the crew of the Mervine, in a sleep that knows no wakening, deep down beneath the rugged surface of the island.

Aunt Mag, Lathrop's last victim, slept in an honored grave in the little cemetery at Kendall.

On the 20th of November, at midday, a yacht of exceeding beauty sailed through the inlet and dropped anchor off Smithville.

A boat was sent ashore, a gentlemanly appearing man, dressed in fashionable attire, climbed the ladder to the wharf. Piver, the pilot, sat there on a coil of rope.

"Hello, Piver!" exclaimed the new rascal. "Don't you know old friends?"

"Old friends? Yes, but you—blast my eyes, if you don't look like Angus. Say, ye, say, sure enough?"

"That I am, Piver, what's left of me; and I believe there's more of me than there was when I was forced to fly from the coast."

"Yes, lad, you have changed much, and you are welcome home again. There be many here who have held from the first that you were neither Black Beard nor the murderer of the banker. All now know who murdered Loyd, and he disappeared as though he had been swallowed up by the waters of the inlet, and become food for the hungry sharks. Perhaps he has, who can tell? But hast thee to thy mother, boy; there will be good times in Smithville now."

"Thanks, Piver." Then, turning to the boat's crew, Angus bade them return to the yacht and await his signal.

"That yacht be a clipper, lad. Whence came she?"

"From Scotland, Piver; from the home of my fathers. She belongs to me."

"Why, so you have not fared ill since you ran away?"

"No, Piver, only in mind. My uncle died while I was in Scotland, and left no issue. I am now Sir Angus, and have inherited the estates of my grandfather, with an income of £20,000 a year."

"Twenty thousand pound a year, and recognize a poor old pilot?"

"Ah, Piver, old friend, the pilots of the Cape Fear have been my best friends; and was not my father one?"

"Aye, lad, and a good one, too."

Twenty minutes later Angus entered the widow's gate, but ere he could cross the threshold he was locked in the arms of his mother and sister, while Tobe was dancing a jig on the piazza to the following tune:

"My young master runned away, long time ago; He come back home, I tol you so, long time ago."

Of the joy of the widow and Jennie over the return of Angus, we will leave the reader to imagine.

"Mother," he said, when they had entered the house, "you can get ready to return to Scotland. I have now a home for you and Jennie in our native land."

"Hugh Gordon told me all, lad. Thou hast come into thine ain; now belike thou'dst wed Clara Hill."

"Hush, mother." "Here be a letter, son, and a box that wur left with me at midnight by the pirate Black Beard not a week before the Mervine went down."

Angus hastily tore open the envelope and read as follows:

"Capt. Angus Bruce—Dear Sir: When I landed you at Beaufort that night, I little thought to fall back on old vocation; but I have almost kept off the coast for a few days, and give you a chance to get away, then gradually the feeling came over me, to fall back to my former life—with a good stanch craft like the Clara Belle, it overmastered me; I sailed for San Domingo, where I shipped some men, and brought away a cargo of negroes; of my other exploits you will probably read. You have always treated me as a man; I know you to be as innocent of the murder of Loyd, as you are of being Black Beard, and it is supposed that you were he, and better so for you, as they will not search for you elsewhere. In time your innocence may be established; I have made my last trip as Black Beard, the Pirat. I shall make but one more of this sort, and that will be my endeavor to capture Lathrop on the night of his marriage to Miss Hill. In which event I shall cause him to confess his crime, and to sign a written document setting forth all circumstances. This confession, if obtained, I shall send to your mother, and should I capture Lathrop, and not be able to obtain it, I shall hang him at the yard-arm of the Clara Belle."

"A word more and I am done. You little know when you employed the stranded seaman that morning, and afterwards made him your mate, that you were placing your craft in the hands of San Domingo, whose condition was lost on this coast nearly three years ago, but which was the case—unless as you probably never see the Clara Belle again, and as I have not the disposition to rob a benefactor, and a man in trouble, I shall leave this letter with a box containing $20,000 in gold, with your mother; as much as I dread to meet her, to remunerate you for the loss of the schooner, in case you are ever able to return home, and if otherwise it will provide for the needs of those you love."

This money is not blood money, neither did it come from the treasury in Washington, but it was received for the negroes we captured in San Domingo, whose condition was rather improved than otherwise, being transplanted to American soil, even as slaves, as you need not hesitate to make out. Now as we'll probably never meet again, wishing you all manner of good luck in the future, that your innocence may be established, and that you may yet win the woman you one day saved from the depths of the Cape Fear, I am unworthily your old Mate,

CALVIN STEWART.

"There is the gold, son, I tried—I tried—but I could na give the mon awa'. When he left the house, I started to call the officers, but I could na doot. What will do with the gold, son?"

"I don't know, mother. We can't send back whence it came; give it to Jennie for a marriage portion."

"Why, the lass will not e'en look at a sweetheart."

"Give her time, mother, give her time; our Jennie is particular."

At two o'clock on the following day the yacht made fast to Orton landing,

The man I love is Angus Bruce.

and Angus followed the rice bank to the house.

He was ushered into the parlor by the maid, who notified Clara that a gentleman had called and inquired for her.

As she entered the door Angus awoke and advanced to meet her and though she knew from remarks made by Gordon that he was liable to come home at any time, she could not suppress the cry:

"Angus! oh, Angus!" and would have fallen to the floor had not his strong arms sustained her.

"Clara, dear, dear Clara! can I believe that you are glad to see me home? Glad to know that the stain is taken from my name? I love you, Clara, with my whole heart and soul. It is not Angus Bruce, the pilot, who speaks to you now, but Sir Angus, who has inherited the title and estates of his ancestors. Your father can no longer object to Angus Bruce. Can you love me, Clara? And will you be my wife at last?"

"The man I love is Angus Bruce, the pilot, the brave captain of his schooner, who rescued me from a watery grave and won my heart; but if he wills it, I will become the wife of Sir Angus."

"Wills it, dear? That one hope has borne him through what has seemed an age of uncertainty, during which time he was deemed to be both Black Beard and the murderer of John Loyd. But, thanks to Gordon and Aunt Mag, all is now made clear. Lathrop has probably paid the penalty of his crimes, either by self destruction or by hanging from the yard arm of the pirate. Black Beard was my former mate, Calvin Stewart, who by this letter you will see but fell back to his old vocation. Ah! your father, Squire Hill, the runaway has returned!"

"And right welcome, Angus, to Orton. Lad! I never could see how you could be guilty of the murder of Loyd, but circumstances were all against you. You did well to fly; else I believe you would have been condemned; by flying you got the right man to establish your innocence, and bring the guilt home to its proper door; of course, when you fled, and the schooner was missing, no one doubted your being Black Beard."

"I have here in my hands, squire, a letter from Black Beard. He was my old mate, Calvin Stewart. Will you read it?"

The squire read the letter, and exclaimed: "He was the curse of this coset, but I am of the opinion that you owe him much, and then $20,000 is not a bad return for the Clara Belle; but this money—"

"I gave it to Sister Jennie as a marriage portion."

"Is she then about to be married?"

"Oh, no, she has not even a sweet heart."

"Squire, I have asked your daughter for her hand."

"Well, don't ask me, I shall never surrender her to unite her fate to that of mortal man from this time forth. Twice I did so; both times she yielded to my persuasion, and she has escaped a terrible fate. For that, I thank God. You have my consent, more I cannot say; if there be urging or persuading to be done, you must plead your own case."

"I have made my plea," said Angus.

"And, father, dear, there need be no urging your daughter to give her hand to Sir Angus, when long months ago she gave her heart to Angus, the captain of the Clara Belle."

"Sir Angus!"

"Yes, squire, I have inherited the title and estates of my grandfather, with an income of £20,000 a year."

"Well, well! Allow me to congratulate you. Bless you! Bless you both! Ahem! I must go and find Tom, the young rascal. It's high time that Jennie Bruce had a sweetheart. Clarence and Fannie now have Kendall and Loyd's fortune; you intend to run away to Scotland with my daughter. Now, if I could just get Tom and Jennie married and settled down here at Orton, my troubles would be ended," and the squire thumped his cane on the parlor floor, and walked from the room.

"Can you take me to the grave of Aunt Mag, Clara?" asked Angus.

"Yes, dear; she lies buried at Kendall."

As the sun was sinking in the west, they stood by a little mound in the lowly cemetery of the slave, at Kendall.

"Faithful soul," said Clara; "but for her I should have been the bride of Lathrop. Could you have seen her as she stood in the chapel at Orton, when after her denunciation of Lathrop she saw that her words were considered without foundation and as coming from a disordered brain, when the clergyman remarked: 'we will proceed with the ceremony.' Her shawl fell from her shoulders, her long, black hair, to her feet, her form erect, and as the words fell from her lips: 'Ole marster, Mag won't fail,' she stepped forward, her right arm extended on high, and clasped in her hand the handle of a dirk. An instant more, and the blade would have fallen, when 'Hold!'

"That one word held it poised in the air, and then Mag stood as a statue, while Hugh Gordon, my brother Tom and the officers marched down the aisle. You know the rest, but could you have beheld that scene you never would forget Aunt Mag."

"Forget? No, dear; over her grave I will have a column raised that shall tell what I would have done had she not been slain. I owe her much. It was Mag that roused me to a sense of my danger that terrible night. There I stood, the bloody knife in my hand, parallelized."

"Fly! Fly!" she cried. "A nigger's oath can't save you. I'll promise to stick to Herbert Lathrop through thick and thin, and your name shall be cleared, etc."

"Well did she perform her promise. She was worthy of a better fate."

Tears were standing in the eyes of each, as they turned from the grave and directed their horses' heads towards the residence of Clarence and Fannie.

A negro took their horses as they dismounted at the house.

The front door was open as they mounted the steps to the piazza, and Fannie and Clarence met them.

Fannie, dear," said Clara, "Sir Angus Bruce."

Fannie burst into a flood of tears at recollections of the past, while Clarence, extending his hand, exclaimed: "Welcome home, and welcome to Kendall, Sir Angus."

They entered the house. The door closed, and there we will leave them.

Here, too, we will leave Kendall and Orton, yet known in the Cape Fear section and Wilmington, where the historic residence so long ago occupied by Lord Cornwallis yet stands; and Smithville, the home of Bruce, where the hardy and adventurous pilots daily place their lives in peril; and lastly, Smith's island, which still occupies its old position.

A government lighthouse was established at this point many years since, and its resplendent light screaming forth from way up aloft nightly warns mariners that they are nearing the inlet; though it is doubtful if either the rays of the sun—yes, or the orbs of any of the hundreds of keen-eyed seekers for Black Beard's hidden treasure have penetrated the surface of the island to a depth sufficient to arouse from their slumbers the silent sentinels who lie guarding it.

Certain it is, that for the last half century the Atlantic coast, from Maryland to Florida, has been explored by white and black alike for the treasure that there lies buried.

[THE END.]

Not to Walk In.

An American in England, who had bought a pair of shoes of a fashionista dealer, carried them back soon with a protest. "Look here!" he said. "You've had these shoes only two weeks and they are completely out of shape and the leather is giving away in two places." The Englishman looked at the shoes an instant. "Dear me! dear me!" he said, "you have been walking in those shoes?" That's it, sir! Our shoes are made only for carriage people, sir!" And the dealer loftily bowed the American and Leather Journal.

THE JAPANESE AND DEATH.

Their Decorous Manner When Attending Funerals.

I have just spoken of the Japanese as behaving simply at funerals. That is only partially correct. They are quiet but not quite simple—so quiet that their manner seems simple. As a matter of fact, they take an elaborate part in the prescribed rites, bowing here, bending there, strewing prayers to the right and sweetmeats to the left. But it is all done "with good accent and with good discretion." They have the art of arts, the art that hides art. Let me dwell upon this thought a moment. Let me put it another way, for it is one of the most beautiful things that can be said of the Japanese. They have learned to apply to life and to art (their life and art are almost one) the great art principles that Hamlet proclaimed to the players. They, in the very torrent, tempest and the whirlwind of passion have acquired and begot a temperament that gives it smoothness. They are not "too tame." Discretion is their tutor, and they overstep not the modesty of nature. And on no other occasion is this splendid national characteristic of smooth, discreet behavior and appropriate action so noticeable or so grateful as when a number of Japanese gather together about the deathbed, the coffin or the grave of friend or kinsman.

The Japanese are as courteous as they are theatrical and artistic. Their courtesy and their art are closely allied. Their keen sense of courtesy, and their unflagging practice of it, has, I believe, as much to do with the quietness and fitness of their funerals as has their fine artistic instinct. They are as a nation even prouder and more studious, I think, of their courtesy than of their artistic excellence. "Cry; it will do you good!" I said once to a poor Japanese woman, who, crouching beside her dying husband, was controlling herself with an effort that would, I feared, make her ill. She laid her little, slim brown finger upon her trembling red lip and shook her head, then whispered: "It might disturb him." "Cry; it will do you good!" I said the next day when the man was dead, and she seemed almost prostrate with grief and overenforced self-control. "It would be most rude to make a hideous noise before the sacred dead," came the soft reply.—St. Paul's.

CENTRAL AFRICAN HUNTING.

Big Birds of Countless Kinds Ready for the Gun of the Sportsman.

There is great sport awaiting the wild-fowl hunters who press across the dry deserts of the North Kalahari to the Botletli or Lake river, as it is usually called. This is where the pelicans, flamingoes, ibises, storks, cranes, herons, fishing eagles, jacons, coots, rails and other aquatic birds unknown to most sportsmen rub bills with ducks, geese, pigeons and teal in countless hosts, offering bird shooting the like of which can scarcely be found elsewhere.

Dr. Hunter Withdraws.

In a communication to a Republican caucus, held at his request Wednesday night, Dr. Hunter announced his withdrawal from the race for Senator. The caucus adjourned until last night without making a nomination, the adjournment being insisted upon by the friends of W. H. Holt. The contest for the nomination is at present between Mr. Holt and State Senator Deboe. Dr. Hunter left Frankfort Wednesday night for Washington. He departed quietly, very few persons at Frankfort knowing of his intention.

Frankfort Topics.

The Republicans broke a quorum yesterday by refusing to vote, and no election was made. The ballot was: Blackburn 45, Martin 15, Stone 1. The Bell-Crumbaugh contest was settled, Crumbaugh (Rep.) retaining his seat.

In the House a heated debate occurred over the anti-turnpike raider bill.

There is a scramble on for the Republican caucus nomination for Senator, and it looks to be Holt against the field. Walter Evans is the latest entry.

Senator Olgive, a Blackburn man who has been ill, is now able to be at Frankfort. This makes seventy votes necessary to elect.

In the House Wednesday a bill was introduced to put trust companies on the same footing as individuals in qualifying as administrators of estates.

A bill has been introduced in the State Senate to reduce the per capita for lunatics and feeble-minded children from $150 to $125 a year. The Senate passed the House bill providing for borrowing $500,000. The bill to restrain mobs has been practically killed in the House. The section making counties responsible for damages caused by mobs was killed.

The bill to issue State bonds for $500,000 has passed both houses and only remains for the signature of the presiding officers and the Governor. The Governor will sign the bill, as he recommended its passage.

THE Louisville Times says: "Monday the Legislature entered with only a pro forma ballot upon the fifth week of its second series in the wearisome farce of how not to elect a senator. Kentucky can run along very nicely upon one senatorial wheel, but this thing of squandering $1,000 a day in a futile effort to transform unicycle into a bicycle is rapidly exhausting the patience of the long-suffering people who are to put up the money."

It is now said to be unlikely that any change will be made in the Civil Service Commission before the expiration of the terms of the present Commissioners.

The Turnpike Problem.

Most of the pike companies in Harrison have called meetings of the directors to consider the sale of the different roads to the county.

Advocates of free pikes held a mass meeting at Nicholasville Monday and formed a club with 800 members. They say they will have a candidate for every office in the county.

The Madison county grand jury adjourned without returning any indictments against turnpike raiders.

The Fleming county Fiscal Court has purchased and will make free 175 miles of turnpike in that county. Similar action has been taken in Scott county, and negotiations for free roads are pending in Mc Cracken.

Plenty of Politics In Store.

HERE is the horrible horoscope presented to that large class of Kentuckians who are longing to get away from political turmoil and get down to business:

1897.—The present senatorial struggle; two State conventions to nominate candidates for Clerk of the Court of Appeals; general election in November for a new Legislature and all county offices; besides the one race for a State office.

1898.—Another session of the Legislature, beginning in January and lasting until nearly April 1; make-up of the race for Governor and all State offices will begin in hard earnest; election of Congressmen in the eleventh districts of the State.

1899.—State Conventions to nominate candidates for Governor and all State offices in the Spring, with a red-hot fight over these offices all summer, and the elections for them in the fall. 1900.—Another presidential campaign.

It is a pretty severe trial of the hard-pressed business man's faith in government of the politicians by the politicians for the politicians. —[Louisville Times.]

The President yesterday nominated Harold M. Sewell, of Maine, to be Minister to Hawaii. Sewell is a son of Arthur Sewell, late candidate for Vice President on the Democratic ticket.

The Air Ship Fafe.

THE air ship sighted in the West is a fake. The aerial monster was manufactured originally in New York, of papier-mache and ordinary balloon material to advertise a certain cigarette.

When it was set free at Denver some wine merchants and other mercantile gentlemen infringed the patent and made papier-mache air ships for their own use. That is why the air ship has been seen at so many places at one and the same time.

There is more than one of them in the sky, and the cigarette balloon is not the only light in the heavens by any means. The whole thing is a clever advertising dodge invented jointly by parties in New York and Chicago.

Mr. Hillenmeyer's Opinion.

Mr. H. F. Hillenmeyer, the Lexington nursery-man, writes as follows about the frosts and fruits, etc.:

"Many inquiries were received asking what the frost of Tuesday morning had done for the fruit. The day preceding had been dry and cold, the night was windy, and every tissue was in the best condition to resist the sharp frost.

While many buds have been frozen, nature provides so amply that there is yet no impairment of the superb fruit prospect that has encouraged the hope of full yields for the summer of 1897. Apples, grapes and the small fruits have been in no way injured by the sharp frosts of the 9th and this morning, nor by the continued rains and low temperature of the month. Fruit trees in bloom are of course not benefited by such conditions, and while peach, plum, pear and cherry trees may bear full this year, the long continuance of either rain or cold at this time would surely cause the expanded flowers to be sterile or to fall, even after pollination had taken place. Since the decadence of greater industries, much more interest has been taken in fruit growing than heretofore, and bountiful yields will keep at home large sums ordinarily expended for fruits, grown both North and South."

Refrigerators never so cheap as this season. FORD & CO.

THE OLD HOME.

'Twas only a humble cottage,
Not far from the village street;
But the old, green meadows inclosed it,
And flowers brought their fragrance sweet.

The birds in the roof's old thatches,
The winds in the tall elm tree,
The pathway that led to the woodlands,
Made the happiest home for me.

Then, no world beyond the meadows
Disturbed my beautiful dream.
My playmates were birds and flowers,
And we used to sing to the stream.
But now the green meadows have widened,
Far, far to the rolling sea,
And I sail away on its bosom
From the home of my infancy.

Oh, lands of crimson and purple!
Oh, white-leaved cities afar!
Ye throb on the restless ocean,
Ye dazzle like orient stars!
But, oh, for the home of my childhood,
And my world of meadow and tree;
For the quiet calm of those old, old days
Has gone forever from me.

THE DIVER'S STORY.

"Waiter, salt for six here! Wilderspin's going to give us that deadly experience of his. Now, captain, forge ahead; it's glasses round for the first man who interrupts. Touch-and-go with death, you say, and yet your hair keeps its original color. How on earth was it?"

Another laugh rippled along the table, but it soon subsided. The old diver's twinkling lips made it clear that his thoughts were elsewhere. He simply sat back, stared fixedly at the shaded candle before him, and broke into the silence with a steady impressiveness
that soon had the company spellbound.

"You'll please yourselves about swallowing this when you've stood in my parlor and seen the newspaper-cuttings on the wall, framed in a bit of the Witch's timber. As for excitement, you mightn't care to sleep through a few of the dreams I've had since. Aye, but the real extraordinary part about it was, if you like, that I should have walked into Lacy Truman's office, in Hobart Town,

as the clock struck 11 that morning.
For I'd been hanging about the docks, hungry and savage, for weeks; and I'd left Jess—my young wife—with the words that, come no luck, I was simply going to steal the money to take us back to England by the next week's steamer.
And I meant that."

"They were ship-brokers, Lacy Truman and his brother. I walked into their outer office without being invited, up to the boss clerk, and told him in so many words I'd come to the end of my tether in that country. 'The old tale! What are you? Anything, eh? Sit down there,' he says. I went to do it, when the door flies open, and the senior partner—I knew them both by sight—staggered in with a face like—like death
itself. He stood there, and rattled out:
'Will, quick! She's gone down—down,
within a mile of dock!'

"That was it. Bang goes the inner door, and the other steps out, white enough, too, in a trice. 'What, the Witch?' he says, almost lower than a whisper. 'I'll never believe it. Sighted at seven this morning, and fondered—Lacy, you're fooling! We've covered her for £8,000.'

"'Gone down!' repeated his brother,
as if he wanted to catch somebody's throat. 'I met Coombes' clerk, coming up here; raced back, and saw the owners and the captain himself. There's no log saved—notthing at all. They simply say that water was pouring in at the fore-hold all day yesterday, no one knows how, and they just had time to put off in the boats before she lurched and settled down, at ten o'clock. That's four since March! We're absolutely ruined!"

The clerks sat there like bits of stone; the two partners stared at each other; you could have heard a feather drop. They were rich, as things go, I'd heard—but four since March!

"Never believe it!" says Will Truman, again, waking up. "There's something wrong; old she was, but good for years yet, I'll swear. My hat! Within a mile? Lacy, surely we can get some of the cargo up before—"

"Yes, to light fires with! The salt will spoil those silk laces in less than three days, man." He was a sight, I tell you. "To go down like that, in smooth water! I told Coombes plainly I don't pay out a farthing until an investigation has been made; and if I suspected anything I'd take action at once."

"You were a fool to hint at anything of the sort!"

"Aye, perhaps I was. We ought to have sent a man down straight away,
to look at her. Who is there? Here,
Johnson, run to Saunders, the diver,
in Market street. Tell him to come here this minute. I'll know the truth of this."

They went into the inner office together. I sat there, hanging on to the buzz of their talk, and fairly itching to do or say something. Then, in about 15 minutes, back tears their clerk with the word that Saunders was very sorry, but the owners had that very minute engaged him to make an investigation
next morning, and he didn't think there was another diver worth a cent in the place just then—he'd find out.

The two partners spun round and looked at each other, and it didn't need words to show what they were thinking. That was my chance, if ever; and before I knew it, I'd speak.

"Yes, there is! Mr. Truman, I'll go down, and welcome. If you think there's anything underhanded, leave it to me."

"You! They'd never noticed me.
Who are you, then?" asked the senior duly. "What might you know about it?"

"A good deal, sir. That's to say, I haven't done any deep-sea work to speak of, but I was five years over in Sunderland, going down and stopping leaks and struts, before they had the dry dock built. That's something, sir.

I was here to ask for work, and there it is. If the silk can be saved—or those £8,000—I'm your man. Try me."

"Well, if this isn't a coincidence," says he, incredulous like. "Will, what do you think? There's no time to lose, that's certain; we must arrange to have our man down with theirs, you know.
Come, I'll take you at your word, Mr.— er—Wilderspin. I want that fore-hold quietly inspected, you understand?
After that—the cargo. Got an outfit?
Then we'll see to that. Come in here, will you? I hardly know what I'm about!"

"Scuttled," he said.
"Scuttled, scuttled!" I yelled back; and the next thing I knew was that I lay on my back, empty-handed. He had tripped me, and jerked away the life-line.
Well, all the blood rushed to my head—that's about all I know.
I lay there, stunned most by the thought that such villainy could find a place in any man's mind. But he was not quite quick enough; as he went to step back,
I caught him behind the knees with one hand, and down he came.
Then came the struggle for life and death, and it doesn't bear describing.
I had tumbled to the whole thing in a flash; he had been offered a price not to let me go up if by chance I found out anything black, and it had been big
enough to make a rogue of him.

"I held on to him for a minute or so
like a vise, but I was underneath, the weight of him on my chest, and the
arrangements, and he means business.
So did the other party, it was plain.
Saunders and I, it was agreed,
were to go down together and report
afterwards. They'd hired a small cutter
between them, and appeared to be
friendly enough on the outside; but
there was something in the air right
enough. Oh, aye!

"Well, the moment the tide had
turned, off we started, with the salvage-
boat and a dozen others after us, to see
what there might be to see. I knew Mr.
Lacy had an idea the other party meant
to hamper us if possible, but it didn't
appear so; in less than an hour they'd
made the spot. Saunders and some of the Witch's crew were straining their eyes over the side.

"There she lies, mates, in ten
fathoms, or I'm a Dutchman," he says,
quietly, to me. "Can ye go the depth?
Right; nothing like pluck, eh? We'll soon know all about her cargo now. Get your things on."

"Down below I goes, and was ready as soon as he. Course, being what he was,
he had the sneer of me the minute he
knew I was no expert; but he seemed
affable enough, and even a little friendly.
Just before we stuck our headgear on,
and Mr. Truman was seeing my tube
extra fast to the pumper, he pulls out a
brandy bottle and offers me a mouthful
offhand. I had it to my lips when someone caught my eyes, and that man—
well, he flinched.

"'Have some yourself,' says I, handing
it back.

"'Always do—well, no, I won't just
yet,' he says, with a laugh, and tosses
the bottle overboard.

"I couldn't quite get the grip of that,
and perhaps it was this action that gave
me a nasty, sinking sensation when I
stood ready, with the helmet on and 30
pounds of solid lead on my boots,
watching him go down the ladder, and
coolly slide into that green ten fathoms.
It was a lot over my old dock depths,
and I felt a bit dreamy, so to speak,
when I heard the engine start pumping
away for me. But there it was—I had no notion of backing out then. Down I stepped, let myself go, and knew not a
thing more till I found myself standing
still on the bottom, dizzy with the
depth, sick after the suspense, and with
sense to gasp out something that sent
him off to the police hot-foot. The next thing I knew was that I'd been ill
for a week, and that they were waiting
for me to give evidence at the trial—
Truman Brothers vs. the owners and
captain of the Witch.

"It lasted days and days, and at first
seemed as if it was going against us.
An expert diver had gone down and
made his report; but the owners calmly
swore that the auger-holes were a revelation to them, and the crew did the same. Only one thing did it—their
captain wasn't to be found or heard of;
and in the end they got off with the
suspicion of conspiracy to defraud,
and the loss of the insurance money
and costs. Of course, it was morally
clear as daylight: they'd over-insured
the cargo, and arranged with the captain
to scuttle the old vessel at a certain
point, and it hadn't turned out quite as
they meant; but all that had to be
proved, and it wasn't properly done to
the court's satisfaction.

"Saunders? Well, there; my blood
boils now at thought of it—he got off
scot-free, and, for all I know, walks
Hobart Town to this day as an honest
man. I see him now, standing up there in the dock, and persisting that I
dreamed it all—had I got insensitive,
and really owed my life to him. Never mind; it's haunted his sleep once or twice since, I will lay. You'll hardly believe that I stuck to the work after
that, but I did. And what's more,
mates, I've got the best part of £300
that Lacy Truman banked for me—just
up by the day when I have to give up business as a deep-sea diver."—Tipt-
bits.

Arrangement of the Hair.

To suit a long, narrow face, the hair
should be dressed round, and it is always
best to show a coil or so from the
side behind the ears; also endeavor
to fill up the nape of the neck as much
as possible.

For a sharp-featured face, always
avoids dressing the hair right at the top of the back of the crown in a line
with the nose, as this accentuates the severe outlines. Dress the hair low down or else quite on the crown-top to meet the fringe.

For a round face, narrow dressings
are becoming, and can be taken well
down the neck.

For a broad face, narrow dressings
are preferable, but which should be
kept somewhat high.

Exceedingly tall people should keep
the hair dressed rather low and decidedly round.

Very short ladies can have their hair
dressed high as it gives addition to their stature.—Chicago Record.

Mock Duck.

Procure a large slice of the round of
beefsteak; season one side with salt,
pepper and sage. Prepare a stuffing as
if for turkey, spread on the meat, roll it up and fasten it with skewers. Dredge the outside with flour. Put into a dripping pan with a cup of boiling
water and add a piece of butter as large as a hickory nut to it, cover and
cook till tender. Remove the cover and brown, basting frequently that it may not harden. Make gravy of the drippings.—Detroit Free Press.

Foreigners in Argentina.

It is estimated that there are 345,393
foreigners in the city of Buenos Ayres,
and that the total number of foreigners
in the Argentine republic is about 1,000, 000.

and turned to crawl back; and there was Saunders stooping behind me. And I was fool enough to take hold of his fingers and plug them in the holes, to make him feel the inside smoothness.

"He seemed startled himself, and didn't say a word till we had clambered down to the sand again. Then, as I went to tug my line, feeling a bit nervous,
he catches my arm, and puts his glass
against mine.

"Scuttled," he said.

"Scuttled, scuttled!" I yelled back; and

anything black, and it had been big
enough to make a rogue of him.

"I held on to him for a minute or so
like a vise, but I was underneath, the
weight of him on my chest, and the
arrangements, and he means business.
So did the other party, it was plain.
Saunders and I, it was agreed,
were to go down together and report
afterwards. They'd hired a small cutter
between them, and appeared to be
friendly enough on the outside; but
there was something in the air right
enough. Oh, aye!

"Well, the moment the tide had
turned, off we started, with the salvage-
boat and a dozen others after us, to see
what there might be to see. I knew Mr.
Lacy had an idea the other party meant
to hamper us if possible, but it didn't
appear so; in less than an hour they'd
made the spot. Saunders and some of
the Witch's crew were straining their
eyes over the side.

"There she lies, mates, in ten
fathoms, or I'm a Dutchman," he says,
quietly, to me. "Can ye go the depth?
Right; nothing like pluck, eh? We'll
soon know all about her cargo now. Get
your things on."

"Down below I goes, and was ready as
soon as he. Course, being what he was,
he had the sneer of me the minute he
knew I was no expert; but he seemed
affable enough, and even a little friendly.
Just before we stuck our headgear on,
and Mr. Truman was seeing my tube
extra fast to the pumper, he pulls out a
brandy bottle and offers me a mouthful
offhand. I had it to my lips when someone
caught my eyes, and that man—
well, he flinched.

"'Have some yourself,' says I, handing
it back.

"'Always do—well, no, I won't just
yet,' he says, with a laugh, and tosses
the bottle overboard.

"I couldn't quite get the grip of that,
and perhaps it was this action that gave
me a nasty, sinking sensation when I
stood ready, with the helmet on and 30
pounds of solid lead on my boots,
watching him go down the ladder, and
coolly slide into that green ten fathoms.
It was a lot over my old dock depths,
and I felt a bit dreamy, so to speak,
when I heard the engine start pumping
away for me. But there it was—I had no notion of backing out then. Down I
stepped, let myself go, and knew not a
thing more till I found myself standing
still on the bottom, dizzy with the
depth, sick after the suspense, and with
sense to gasp out something that sent
him off to the police hot-foot. The
next thing I knew was that I'd been ill
for a week, and that they were waiting
for me to give evidence at the trial—
Truman Brothers vs. the owners and
captain of the Witch.

"It lasted days and days, and at first
seemed as if it was going against us.
An expert diver had gone down and
made his report; but the owners calmly
swore that the auger-holes were a revelation to them, and the crew did the
same. Only one thing did it—their
captain wasn't to be found or heard of;
and in the end they got off with the
suspicion of conspiracy to defraud,
and the loss of the insurance money
and costs. Of course, it was morally
clear as daylight: they'd over-insured
the cargo, and arranged with the captain
to scuttle the old vessel at a certain
point, and it hadn't turned out quite as
they meant; but all that had to be
proved, and it wasn't properly done to
the court's satisfaction.

"Saunders? Well, there; my blood
boils now at thought of it—he got off
scot-free, and, for all I know, walks
Hobart Town to this day as an honest
man. I see him now, standing up there
in the dock, and persisting that I
dreamed it all—had I got insensitive,
and really owed my life to him. Never
mind; it's haunted his sleep once or twice since, I will lay. You'll hardly
believe that I stuck to the work after
that, but I did. And what's more,
mates, I've got the best part of £300
that Lacy Truman banked for me—just
up by the day when I have to give
up business as a deep-sea diver."—Tipt-
bits.

Arrangement of the Hair.

To suit a long, narrow face, the hair
should be dressed round, and it is always
best to show a coil or so from the
side behind the ears; also endeavor
to fill up the nape of the neck as much
as possible.

For a sharp-featured face, always
avoids dressing the hair right at the
top of the back of the crown in a line
with the nose, as this accentuates the
severe outlines. Dress the hair low
down or else quite on the crown-top to
meet the fringe.

For a round face, narrow dressings
are becoming, and can be taken well
down the neck.

For a broad face, narrow dressings
are preferable, but which should be
kept somewhat high.

Exceedingly tall people should keep
the hair dressed rather low and decidedly round.

Very short ladies can have their hair
dressed high as it gives addition to their
stature.—Chicago Record.

Mock Duck.

Procure a large slice of the round of
beefsteak; season one side with salt,
pepper and sage. Prepare a stuffing as
if for turkey, spread on the meat, roll it
up and fasten it with skewers. Dredge the outside with flour. Put into a dripping pan with a cup of boiling
water and add a piece of butter as
large as a hickory nut to it, cover and
cook till tender. Remove the cover and
brown, basting frequently that it may not harden. Make gravy

THE FARMING WORLD.

GOOD CORN MARKER.

It Has Given Satisfaction to All Who Have Used It.

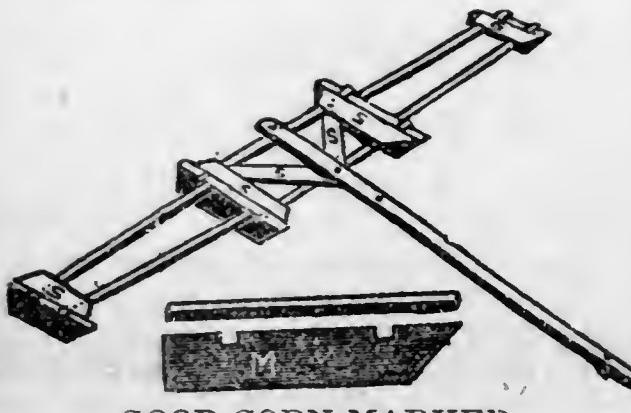

I made a corn marker like the diagram herewith, about eight years ago. It has done faithful service annually for myself and neighbors ever since, but now I find it worn and disjointed almost beyond repair. In planning to make another, because of its admirable adaptation to its special use, the great satisfaction it gives to those who use it, and the ease with which any farmer handy with tools can make it, I am prompted to send a description and drawing for the benefit of other readers.

The runners are preferably made of hard wood sawed 2 by 10 inches; the outside ones 2½ feet long on top and the two middle ones 4 feet long. For my use they are fixed 3½ feet apart. The transverse strips which secure them may be of 1½ by 2-inch stuff, excepting front piece in center to which tongue is attached, which should be 2 by 4 for greater strength. The cross-strips connecting the two longer runners should be two feet apart, to which the tongue should be attached in the center with one-half-inch bolts, and forward of the front strip 15 inches should be bored a hole for attaching doubletree and one 9 feet forward of that for the neck-yoke spud. A deep slot should be cut in rear end of tongue where attached and a shallow one in front, so as to raise front end the right height for neck-yoke on team, so that the runners may stand level, thereby preventing unnatural wear on rear end of runners by being tilted up in front.

The boards marked S are 1 by 6 and firmly nailed in place as shown, giving great strength to implement.

The outer runners or wings are bolted near the central ones with one-half-inch bolts, so as to move up and down freely. After cutting shallow slots near the ends of the transverse connections, fit them in deeper slots cut in runners as seen at M, then nail the lath firmly across them.

Modus Operandi.—Run the rows by stakes. Use but three and cut them 2½ times as long as your rows are wide, i. e., for a 3½-foot marker make the stakes 8 feet 9 inches long and sharpen large end. In commencing a field set stakes right distance from one side for first through (you can guess at this) four or five rods from end set the first, the second in the middle, and the third four or five rods from opposite end; get your team with marker in range with the stakes (which of course were set in line) and the driver standing on marker with one foot near inside of each center runner advances to first stake, stop, and removing stake, bumps the top end against outside of outside runner and raising same forces it into the ground as a guide for the next through; he then remounts and proceeds likewise with the middle stake, but upon reaching the end stake drives over same and stopping at the end throws up both outside wings, turns and drives up until in range with the two stakes now standing, drops the wings and advances until opposite the stake just driven over when he stops and sets the same as before, and thus continues until the field is completed.

By exercising a little care a skillful man can run "air lines" just as far as the stakes are visible.—L. M. Kramer, in Ohio Farmer.

Irrigation on the Farm.

In laying out a system of ditches for irrigation purposes good care and time should be observed. Ditch lines should be run as much as possible on the high parts of the farm, and the grade should be light, about four feet to the mile bearing about what ordinary soils will best stand. The ditch should always be larger than is apparently necessary. Both ditch and bank should be built broad, and particular care given to prevent the liability of a little stream of water starting out from the side somewhere and cutting away both ditch and bank and inundating the field.—Dakota Field and Farm.

The City and the Farm.

The city and the farm are dependent one upon the other. The people of the city look to the farm for the necessities of life, and the farmer looks to them for a market for his produce, for his clothes, and the implements with which to carry on his work. In their dependency they are equal, with no shade or sign of antagonism between them. Each fulfills its special mission in the industrial life of the country; therefore, respect your calling, and cast no envious eyes upon the other. Do that which lieth before you, and do it well.—Rural World.

Corn in Place of Wheat.

The difference between the prices of corn and wheat during the past year has led to a larger use of corn in place of wheat as bread. Not only has its use been increased directly in the familiar form of cornmeal, but indirectly by blending the corn product with wheat flour. This blended flour is made both for the home market and for export. To what extent the blending practice has been carried is not known accurately, it being in some sense a trade secret. A reliable trade journal estimates a reduction of eight per cent. in the consumption of wheat flour in this country.

Be sure that all the sheep are properly tagged before they are turned into the pastures.

MARVELS OF SCIENCE.

Wonderful Works of the Inventors of the Age.

Flying is solved. The principle is known. A mechanical expedient is all that is now needed to make it successful. Practical flight is to-day not more than five or ten years off.

A glow worm makes light with about one three-hundredth part of the force used in ordinary artificial light. When men know how to make light as cheap, streets and homes will be as light as day for a mere fraction of what light now costs. This is near. Vacuum illumination without incandescence is already in full operation, and in a year or two should cut down the price of light to a sixth of its current cost, and in five or ten years light may be, like water, turned on in every house at will.

Compressed air has long been known to be the best way, theoretically, to store force for use in transportation. There is no waste and no deterioration. The need is a cheap and efficient motor to apply compressed air to city transportation. If this can be done, first the trolley poles and wires will come down, next the horseless, compressed air motor carriage will do all the work of city delivery.

When these come the only use for gas will be for cooking—if this is not done by electricity. Factories, also, before many years, will be run by transmitted electric power. This has begun to be done and in five or ten years will be completed, and the factory fire and boiler will be a thing of the past.

The city of the future, and no very distant future, will have no trolley poles or wires and no horses. All movements will be on rail by silent air motors or by horseless carriages equally silent.

All pavements will be asphalt. Unlimited light will be as cheap as unlimited water is to-day. No coal will be delivered at private houses and no ashes taken from them. With no horses, no coal and no ashes, street dust and dirt will be reduced to a minimum. With no factory fires and no kitchen or furnace fires, the air will be as pure in the city as in the country. Trees will have a chance; houses be warmed and lighted as easily and cheaply as they are now supplied with water.

A city will be a pretty nice place to live in when the first 20 years of the twentieth century are passed.—Philadelphia Press.

CHILDREN IN HOLLAND.

Little Lads and Lasses in a Scherenschnigen Kindergarten.

Wandering through the crooked streets of the little fishing village of Schereningen, from which the famous Dutch watering place takes its name, I heard merry shouts of laughter issuing from a garden inclosed by high walls. The gate was open and I peeped in. My curiosity was rewarded by one of the sweetest sights I ever witnessed. About 20 little Dutch maids and lads, their ages varying from three to six years, were enjoying a game of ordinary American tag, while a little attendant of about 12 years stood by, busily knitting, while she watched them. A bell sounded; they all fell in line behind the little knitter, and walked demurely, two by two, in a serpentine line around the garden and disappeared in a long hall, at the door of which each child took off its little wooden shoes and held them in one hand behind its back.

In the meantime the principal came out and invited me, by signs, to enter. In the hall I noticed the little sabots laid orderly side by side. There were three halls in this kindergarten; in each were 50 children, between the ages of three and six years—the girls in gowns to their ankles, held out in balloon fashion with haircloth petticoats, with little shawls pinned over the shoulders, and caps covering their straight, yellow locks.

At this free kindergarten the children of the fisher folk, many of them fatherless, derive all care and attention. They are taught by the same methods used in Germany. All seemed bright and happy. In one room they were singing quaint little nursery rhymes about boats, so one little fellow made me understand by walking across the floor, rolling like a sailor, and then going through the motions of rowing a boat and pulling in nets. He with great glee made me understand that he would be a fisherman when he was "so big," stretching up his arms, and sucking an imaginary pipe. This amused the children so much, and made them shout and laugh so loud, that the teacher was obliged to send them to their seats and end our fun.—Washington Star.

Spread of Tuberculosis.

A very eminent scientist is responsible for the following statement: "If the habit of expectoration in public could be stopped, I am sure that in time tuberculosis would die out altogether. This seems a very sweeping statement, but it is not an ill-considered one. There is no question in my mind that the spread of tuberculosis is due largely to the habit of spitting. A great many people have tuberculosis without being aware of the fact. They do not know of the danger that comes from ejecting their sputum where it becomes dry and pulverizes, and then flies about in minute particles, to be inhaled by healthy persons, who are thus inoculated with the disease. This random public expectoration is a crime." The difficulty of such an undertaking as putting a stop to expectoration in public is, or ought to be, apparent to even the most obtuse person.—N. Y. Ledger.

Bitter Disappointment.

"Yes," she said, bitterly, "I must confess that he deceived me as to his habits."

"Does he drink, or gamble, or anything of that kind?" inquired the other. "No. Before we were wed he led me to believe that he had a habit of talking in his sleep about all his doings. And he does not."—Indianapolis Journal.

A DRESSMAKER'S TROUBLES.

Questions and Answers.

The following answers are guaranteed by a Philadelphia paper to have been made at the graduation exercises of one of the leading grammar schools of Boston:

"Name a fruit which has its seed on the outside." "A seed cake."

"Name six animals of the Arctic zone."

"Three polar bears and three seals."

"What are the last teeth that come to a man?" "False teeth."

"What is yeast?" "Yeast is a vegetable flying about in the air, hitching itself on to anything."

"Name and locate the five senses."

"The eyes are in the northern part of the face, and the mouth in the southern."

"Explain 'flinch' and use it in a sentence." "Flinch, to shrink. Flannel flinches when it is washed."

The Hand X-Ray.

The Roentgen rays are now applied by silk experts to distinguish male from female cocoons by taking a picture of the chrysalis inside the cocoon. It is known that the male cocoon gives much more silk than the female one. The eggs inside the female chrysalis are not so easily penetrated by the rays as the rest of the chrysalis and stand out distinctly in a photograph.

$100 Reward $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for a case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

An Appeal for Assistance.

The man who is charitable to himself will listen to the mute appeal of assistance made by his stomach, or his liver, in the shape of divers dyspeptic qualms and uneasy sensations in the regions of the gland that secretes his bile. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, my dear sir, or madam—as the case may be—is what you require. Hasten to use if you are troubled with heartburn, wind in the stomach, or a poor appetite.

It is scarcely necessary for me to say that the pills cured me of my headache and all the accompanying ailments. They did and built up my system wonderfully. I now keep a box of the pills in my house all the time, and whenever I am troubled with a headache or any feeling indisposed in any other way, I simply take a pill and drive the ache, pain or weariness away. I have recommended the pills to others who follow the same occupation that I do, and they have profited by the suggestion, and are as sincere in their praise of the medicine as I am.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and energy to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

BONES OF ST. PATRICK.

Claim That Relics in Montreal Church Are Genuine.

Recently a statue of St. Patrick, from the studio of a sculptor in Rome, Italy, was placed in the church of St. Patrick's church, which edifice recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. On the breast of the statue is a small box which, it is claimed, contains a portion of the bones of Ireland's patron saint. The question having been raised as to the genuineness of this relic, documentary evidence has been produced showing that it had for centuries been in the possession of the monastery of the Holy Cross in Saxon Urvo, Italy. This institution has a fully attested record proving beyond question that the relic is a portion of the mortal remains of Ireland's saint. Great interest is manifested among the Catholic community as to whether the relic will manifest any miraculous characteristics. It was presented to the church through Mgr. Le Clair, one of the professors of the Canadian college at Rome, who formerly was one of the priests of St. Patrick's.

Homesickness' Excursion Tickets.
